New Courses

THEO 341 Apocalypse Then (And Now) Fall, 3(3-0-0)

This course will examine the book of Daniel, the "synoptic apocalypse" (Mark 13, Matthew 24, Luke 21) and the book of Revelation in order to determine how their first audiences were challenged to interpret and respond to coming apocalyptic events. In the light of Christian debates about the Millennium, the Second Coming and Final Judgement and with attention to apocalyptic themes in contemporary novels and films, we shall also discuss how biblical apocalyptic literature might speak to us today.

Prerequisites: THEO 250

THEO 342 Facing the Darkness: Encountering the Human Nature of Evil Winter, 3(3-0-0)

We shall wrestle with the origin, nature and challenge of evil by engaging a wide variety of biblical, theological and anthropological (/psychological) resources. Topics to be covered include: the lament literature of the Bible (including Job), the nature of Satan, idolatry and the demonic, the transmission of evil across the generations, the dynamics of being both victims and agents of evil, the emergence of evil as a problem in theistic evolution, and the New Testament portrayal of the overcoming of the powers and principalities through the Cross. The course will begin with an examination of "protest theism" and the various attempts to develop a viable theodicy. Discussions will close by reflecting on the relationship between justice and mercy, judgment and forgiveness.

Prerequisites: THEO 250

THEO 364 The Future in the Past: Historical Theology Winter, 3(3-0-0)

A study of the development of Christian doctrine from the early church to the present time. Students read from representative theologians in various periods of church history.
